

LASSEN COMMUNITY COLLEGE
CODE OF ETHICS FOR MANAGEMENT
Academic Year 2019/2020

“Professionalism, ethical behavior, moral values and personal integrity are not factors acquired with earned degrees, credentials, licenses or certificates of competency, but rather are the sum total of a person’s character which governs their perception of their personal obligation and commitment to contribute to their society in a positive manner.

Each person forms their character through interaction with the value structure of the family and society in which they find themselves, as well as any organized and/or personal religious philosophy that they have embraced. We must then recognize the disparities that will arise among individuals in the formation of their personal character.

In order to embrace a common code of work ethics, the Management Team subscribes to the following:

We, the members of the Lassen Community College Management Team, will, in the conduct of our management responsibilities, endeavor to conduct ourselves in a manner leading to maximum benefit for those whom we serve and with whom we come into contact, in a demeanor bringing credit to our Co-Managers and the Institution and the governing board that we serve.
